The 3rd Round of the FIA European Championship once again confirmed CRG colors among the protagonists of International karting, in particular in the OK category with Louis Iglesias, who started from the 2nd row in the Final, after the excellent performances in the Qualifying Practice, Heats and Super Heats. However, the Frenchman immediately lost positions due to a slight collision in the 1st lap, remaining in traffic and finishing the race only in P13. It didn't go any better for Gabriel Gomez, who lost a Heat and was only in P17 in the intermediate ranking on Saturday, before finishing the Super Heat in P4, recovering some places for the starting grid of the Final. Unfortunately, however, a contact in the Final definitively put an end to his race and, probably, to his hopes of winning the title for which only mathematics still keeps him in the running, despite remaining in P2 in the general classification.

The Chinese Ka Po Yu went much better in the Final, achieving a solid top ten, just as Davide Bottaro finished in the points, 14th place under the chequered flag. Tom Dussol also had a positive weekend, finishing in P23 in the Final. The team balance for the CRG Racing team is also positive due to the fact that 6 drivers qualified for the Final, making it the 2nd most numerous brand.

In the OKJ category, there was still a lot of bad luck for François Kerdal and Manu Miguez, while Asher Ochstein once again had an excellent weekend, narrowly missing out on the points in the Final.

The last event with the FIA European Championship is scheduled for August 4th in Sweden when the titles will be awarded.
